

We all enjoy going to exhibitions and lectures, or on cultural walks, in the company of friends and acquaintances. But if for some reason no one is available we can end up not going. Now The Arts Society Blackwater has launched an initiative to overcome this predicament.

Our Visits Team, Marian Redding and Carole Tibballs, is piloting what they are calling Arts Active, which is based on the premise that as a society of like-minded and friendly people we are happy to attend events in the company of each other.

This is how it works: members agree to alert each other – via an email - of upcoming events they would like to attend. Anyone wishing to join would then liaise directly with the member and arrangements made. In this way small groups of members can attend events, especially at relatively short notice.

Should there be ten or more members interested in a particular activity, Marian and Carole will endeavour to obtain group discounts where possible.

Members can notify each other of interesting events by emailing them, adding news to the website or / and telling Marian or Carole.

This initiative will be closely monitored over the coming few months, and will operate in addition to the society's published Visits Programme.

To join Arts Active, merely complete this registration form and hand it to any committee member.

I would like to join Arts Active (no fee involved) and am happy to be contacted by email with information about Arts Active events.
